some fine music.

The remains of Jacob Christensen were taken to the Lutheran cemetery three miles west of town where the ritual services of the American Legion were given by Chaplain Squire, assisted by Dr. Peters, after which the firing squad fired the salute and taps sounded.

From the Lutheran cemetery the funeral procession started for the Markus Johnson home where a large crowd had assembled to pay the last honor and respect to a departed and honored soldier. It is estimated that at least two thousand people were gathered at the Johnson home, where services were conducted by Rev. Broadland and Rev. Leverson, assisted by Chaplain Squire.

After the services at the home the assemblage escorted the remains to the Carlson cemetery, where the remains were laid to rest, the American Legion giving the ritual ceremony, which was very impressive.
